JEWS AND THE ELECTIONS

What is the position of the Canadian Jews in politics? Have the Jews any special claim or pretensions and, if they do, to what extent are these justifiable?

These questions crop up during every election campaign. Their significance is not always fully appraised, and the proffered answers are generally partial and partisan. Politicians who are in charge of the realities of the campaigns are the ones who usually essay to deal with them, and their attitude is, in the main, dictated by the exigencies of the special situations.

In the present provincial campaign the question of the Jewish claim to political preferment has received more than the customary amount of attention. The section of Jewish opinion which holds that the Jewish population of this city is entitled to a representative in the legislature has been unusually vocal. First, the claim was pressed forcibly by several of the party conventions. Now, it is published broadcast by the Jewish candidate who is seeking election on its strength.

Now, viewed purely in the light of the theory of Canadian politics, there is no doubt that the contention that the Jews are entitled to special Jewish representation is unfounded. Canadian political theory proceeds on the assumption that parliament does not recognize any creeds or races or special groups. It consists of representatives who come together as Canadians to deal with the problems that confront the Canadian people as Canadians. The basis of the franchise is Canadian citizenship. The qualifications for political leadership are willingness to serve the people and ability to do so. For the sake of workability, political opinion is divided into two main, comprehensive sections. One is supposed to be congenitally liberal; the other congenitally conservative. All political problems are capable of being fitted into the scheme of either of the parties. Any alignments other than those of the two parties are deemed to be unnecessary and cumbersome. For political purposes Canadians drop all their peculiarities, special interests, group characteristics and shades of opinion, and merge into the monochrome of either of the parties.

No doubt, by suppressing differences, and accentuating similarities—theoretically—a certain measure of convenience in political management is achieved. We know only too well that differences of faith and opinion, honestly observed, often tend to bring about quarrels and schisms. By ruling out all divisions and distinctions as irrelevant, political discipline and governmental efficiency are rendered possible. This being the case, it is evident that Jews can no more claim special considerations than Methodists, or Quakers, or teamsters or editorial-writers. As far as politics are concerned these different types of people can be only either conservatives or liberals.

When we enter the realm of practical politics, however, we find that human nature, at work there, scorns abstract theories, and operates with rules and principles of its own.

BLACK IS WHITE—FOR DUKES

RABBI FERDINAND M. ISSERMAN

Startling indeed was the announcement recently made by officials of the Roman Catholic Church that the marriage of Consuelo Vanderbilt and the Duke of Marlborough has been annulled. For twenty-five years they had lived together as man and wife. Two children had been born to them. Then they were divorced, and both of them re-married. The Duke desired to enter the Roman Catholic Church, but as that church recognizes no divorce, he could not be received until by some legerdemain his divorce from his first wife was made to vanish. The ecclesiastical authorities overcame the difficulty by declaring null and void his first marriage. Hence, no divorce had been necessary, and hence the Duke could be welcomed into the folds of the church. The grounds for the annulment as given by the church officials were that Consuelo married against her wishes and under compulsion and even though blessed by a protestant clergyman and certified by the state and sealed by twenty-five years of full married life, there had been no marriage. Therefore, no divorce had been necessary and hence the Duke's record was clean and he could be accepted into the Catholic communion.

The motives of the church have been suggested by an American journal. Roman Catholicism is making headway in England, especially among the upper classes. Thus far one duke had entered the fold. Another duke, one as prominent as the Duke of Marlborough, who would add much to the prestige of the church, was a prize worth striving for. Pilpul was resorted to, and a church which accuses the rabbis of the Talmud of legalism, found a way of declaring a marriage of twenty-five years' standing null and void. We deplore very much the action of the church, especially because of its reaction on all religious institutions. The critics of religion will be reassured of the truth of their charge that immunity from the violation of religious laws and rites is a commodity which can be bought—that the church has one law for the rich and another for the poor. I wonder how a similar petition from an Italian peasant would have fared. The church it seems needed the title to strengthen its position, and it was ready to pay for it.

Consuelo's father too many years ago wanted a title. He had wealth and power and he wanted good blood, aye noble blood, in his family. There was a duke in England, a member of an aristocracy which sneers at money and commerce and industry, who had everything in the world but a large income to live up to the demands of his station. Consuelo had money. The Duke had a title. They made a bargain. Consuelo received a title and the duke the money. The title did not make Consuelo happy, nor the money the duke. If these rich American mammas who go abroad with their daughters, hunting titles and searching for good blood, would only keep this in mind, that neither a title nor a large income can make for happiness in married life, much misery would be avoided. Disgusting indeed is the mercenary element which is inevitable in the marriage of modern aristocracy with the rich bourgeois. In Philadelphia, two years ago, a Jewish girl whose father had accumulated wealth,

Power Demand Doubles Every Seven Years

That is a matter of record for Canada and the United States.

The reasons are clear—population increase, industrial expansion, growing use of appliances which require electric power.

And that is why securities of power companies rank next to high-grade government bonds in public favor.

The Quinte and Trent Valley Power Co. is a power company which enjoys a strong financial position and can look to a prosperous future. Present earnings leave a substantial margin for common stock dividends after meeting preferred stock dividends and all prior charges.

We strongly recommend the preferred stock as a secure and profitable investment.

Price: $99.00 a share and accrued dividend to yield more than 7%.

The name and address of the letter-writer will be furnished upon the request of any well-intentioned person who wants to help this man. How about it?

Following is an excerpt from a letter received by this column:

"The Toronto Local Council of Women, through its citizenship committee, is arranging an international night for November 30 at Sherbourne House. The personnel of the gathering, if invitations are accepted, will be men and women of all nationalities in the city, 'ordinary' Canadians who have shown cosmopolitan interests, the sub-executive of the Council and the presidents of the sixty-five affiliated clubs that form the body of the Council, among these being at least three Jewish societies. Several of us have been interested in 'travelling' in Toronto for three or four years, getting acquainted to a greater or less extent with people whose experiences in their native countries and traditions have been different from ours. We had a committee in the Home and School Council in which we worked to dispel our own ignorance relating to foreign-born people. We wrote some papers for our own development which also gave a little information to women (and men) who lived in too small circles. We all miss so much by the narrow way of living. On several occasions we have attempted international gatherings of one kind or another. Whatever the result the aim was friendly in community clubs, Home and School Council and Local Council. We always worked toward getting acquainted and toward getting the other man's standpoint. We would be glad of some favourable comment upon this 'party' of the citizenship committee."

No comment could be made upon this party other than favourable comment. The letter itself is from a woman who worked to dispel her own ignorance relating to foreign-born people, who wrote papers for her own development, who feels that people miss so much by the narrow way of living, who always worked toward getting the other man's standpoint. There is none of the fatuous uplift drivel here which so antagonizes minority groups and gives their thinking members the creeps. It is to be hoped that all Jews who are invited will go to the party. Upstruggle instead of uplift in the matter of understanding between the people of various racial groups is, alas, not the commonest approach. It should be rewarded with enthusiastic co-operation.

The Federation needs more money for its work. There are always poor people wanting help. The Sick Children's Hospital is in need of money again. There are always sick children. Institutions that are in business for the sake of the poor and the sick seem to eat up money. If you give them money they can't keep it. Either they give it out for to-day's needs or they go and enlarge their scope.

The Federation wants to know if you are tired of giving? Tired of giving what? The Federation is not asking money of those whose every crumb seems big. It is asking money of those who have enough for at least some luxuries and of others who have every luxury now. If you are tired of giving it means you are tired of giving from amusements, luxuries, entertainments, automobiles or of your surplus after need has been filled and your cravings satisfied.

Contrast your lot with the lot of those others who are tired of giving . . . . . tired of giving their strength, their hopes, their health, their dreams in a world where a few have a lot and the many have nothing. Make it a point of pride to give dollars you won't miss to those who give the fibre of their beings in the struggle of life. Show your appreciation of the great work the Sick Children's Hospital does for Jewish children and for all children who need its ministrations.

If you haven't money give of your personality. Never let a cry for help go unheard when it comes from a deserving agency. If you can't give coin, interest some person who can in the work that worthy institutions do for unfortunate human beings. Don't get tired of giving for there isn't any rest from that. Bernard Baron, of London, well-known millionaire philanthropist, is continuing his good work of assisting necessitous Institutions. Not content with donating more than £750,000 last year, to both Jewish and non-Jewish hospitals, orphanages, boys' and girls' clubs, etc., and further amounts during the present year, including £25,000 recently to the Keren Hayesod, Mr. Baron is still to the fore. The other day the consecration ceremony took place of the Infirmary, a new wing of the Jews' Hospital and Orphan Asylum, West Norwood, on the outskirts of London. The building has been presented in its entirety by Mr. Baron and Mr. Anthony de Rothschild, President of the Institution, rightly paid a high tribute to "the generosity of one who has been distinguished by Prince of Givers." Schwarzbard Trial Opens

(From the London Jewish Chronicle)

Paris.—Several witnesses were heard in court recently before Judge [illegible] with reference to the charge against Petlura. The prisoner was present in court, but his counsel, Advocate Torrès, was absent.

The surprise of the day was the appearance of the brother of the late General Petlura, who is known as "General" George Petlura. He declared that he would present a civil claim apart from Mme. Petlura. The Advocate who will appear for him is Maitre Wilm, a former Socialist who was banished from the party. The new claim, it is stated, will prolong the investigation and delay the trial.

The first witness examined was Advocate Slioeberg, who said that he had never heard of anyone who was punished by the late General for taking part in or organizing a pogrom. Although Petlura had not personally taken part in the pogroms, the witness considered him responsible for them because he had not taken sufficiently energetic steps for their suppression.

Mr. Shulgin, a former Minister of Foreign Affairs, and of the Minorities in the Petlura Cabinet in Ukraine, urged that it was unjust to hold the late General Petlura responsible for the pogroms. He had documents to prove that Petlura was opposed to the pogroms.

Mr. Bespalko, another former Minister of the Petlura Cabinet, and one of the Ukrainian Socialist leaders, said that he was a friend of the Jews, and that the Jews were mistaken about Petlura's character. He asserted that he had been sent by his late chief to different places to counteract the pogroms.

Mr. Albert Baudry, a Frenchman who lived in Kieff for thirty years, said that it was an act of ingratitude on the part of the Jews to denounce Petlura, who had given them autonomy and a Jewish Ministry. He was convinced that Petlura was not responsible for the pogroms, which were organised by irregular gangs.

General Davitchenko, one of Petlura's commanders, who is said to have himself organized Jewish massacres, told the court that he had instructions from Petlura to suppress the pogroms.

The pro-Petlura witnesses were then confronted with Messrs. Schwarzbard and Slioeberg. Mr. Shulgin asserted that Petlura shot Attaman Simosenko, the organiser of the Proskuroff pogrom. Mr. Schwarzbard pointed out that the execution took place eight months after the pogrom for a reason not connected with the massacre. He drew the attention of the court to Petlura's co-operation with Germany in the struggle against the French troops at Odessa. As for the Zhitomir massacre of Jews, Petlura was himself present in the town during the terrible event.

The hearing in court has left the impression that the Ukrainians have organised themselves fully for the trial. Under the direction of Messrs. Shulgin and Bespalko the Ukrainian Committee has prepared a vast collection of material intended to show that the late General Petlura was opposed to the pogroms in Ukraine and to anti-Semitism. The material will be submitted to the Court which will try M. Schwarzbard.

M. Bespalko is a member of the Socialist International, but despite the recent discussion by the International on the Schwarzbard case, he is displaying marked antagonism to the Jews. "The late General Petlura," he declared here, "is holy to all Ukrainians, and I must warn the Jews not to defend Schwarzbard, unless they want to incur the anger of the entire Ukrainian nation."

On behalf of the Schwarzbard defence, Mr. Lazare, the noted French journalist, is conducting investigations in the Ukraine in his client's [illegible]

The pogroms took place under Petlura's Government in order to report to French public opinion through the medium of the Press and the League for Human Rights. He has interviewed hundreds of Jews who were injured in the pogroms and has collected a big sheaf of material to take back with him to France showing the part which Petlura himself played in the pogroms, how far he was responsible for them, and who it was who had backed him and provided him with financial means.

The Soviet Embassy at Vienna, through its Press Department, has invited the Jewish journalists in Vienna to the Embassy and has shown them a number of documents proving Petlura's responsibility for the pogroms against the Jews in the Ukraine. The documents prove in particular that there was a close connection between Petlura and the pogromist leader, Hetman Struk. There are a number of letters showing that Petlura was in constant communication with the Hetman Struk and knew of his pogrom activities. There are also a number of photographs of pogrom scenes. The documents and photographs will be sent to Paris by the Embassy to be placed at the disposal of the Schwarzbard defence.

The preliminary investigations into the Schwarzbard case have been conducted before the Examining Magistrate in Paris for some time. The case for the defence has been put by Henry Torrès. Mr. Vladimir Tchenkin, president of the first Jewish National Assembly in the Ukraine, was the first witness called. He described the negotiations that were carried on between the Jewish representatives and Petlura to have him stop the pogroms. But that Petlura appeared to be disinclined to have them stopped. The complicity of Petlura in the pogroms was also proved by Mr. Tcherikower, who cited from documents that established the share the Attaman leader had in the outrages. Miss Grinberg, the matron of a hospital in Proskuriv during the period of the pogroms, described the horrible cases that came to her notice of the victims of the cossack attacks. Her description was so horrifying that the magistrate had to stop her recital.

An effort is being made by Ukrainians in Lemberg to collect data which will establish the innocence of Petlura in connection with the anti-Jewish pogroms. The first attempt in this direction was when the prosecution brought forth the point that a certain hetman was executed by Petlura because of his complicity in the pogroms. The defense, however, proved that this person was executed fifteen months after the pogroms and that the reason for his execution was entirely unconnected with the pogroms.

The Polish police confiscated in Warsaw a volume of poems entitled "Trauer Lieder," by Schwarzbard, which was published there recently.

CREMATION CASE IN POLAND

The cremation of the body of a Polish Jewish merchant has caused considerable excitement in Poland and is now being tried in the courts. The Warsaw Rabbinate refused the burial of the ashes of the cremated body in the family plot in the cemetery, but set aside a plot for it near the fence of the cemetery. The family of the deceased protested against the decision and refused to follow directions of the Rabbinic authorities. The ashes have been sent to Dantzig to be kept there in a crematorium and the case was brought before the highest court for decision. The Rabbis maintain that cremation was against Jewish law and practice and that the ashes of a cremated body could not be deposited in consecrated ground.

Contrasts in Warsaw

By M. LUBARSKI

If you walk down the streets of Warsaw, especially the Jewish streets, you will soon [illegible] at the different aspects of [illegible]. Or, for example, how [illegible] Chasidic [illegible] with curling [illegible], and by his side, jostling him with [illegible], flirtles elegantly [illegible], powdered and [illegible]. An [illegible] with a long [illegible] passes, [illegible] with his hair [illegible], who turns your head away [illegible] perfume [illegible] which [illegible] and always! Date for eight? You meet two [illegible] is running [illegible] from a Chasidic meeting-house, the other from a dancing hall.

And [illegible] people do [illegible] from different [illegible] belong to the [illegible] quent-ly ev[illegible] The father [illegible] be, whenever he [illegible] to care, be it [illegible] the son [illegible] cing, in the same street, the daughter in her short [illegible] and powdered face jostles [illegible] father in the [illegible]. This is the way it goes in Warsaw at home everything is orderly [illegible] —but the daughter has nothing in common with her home. Even her parents call her by her "Christian" name which she, the daughter, has adopted. The father minds his own business, and the daughter minds hers.

What father would dream of kicking up a row if his daughter came home at four in the morning? The father knows very well that his daughter is at a fancy-dress ball tomorrow at a dancing hall and any other day at some sort of a jollification at a friend's. And that's that. The world wags.

And as the daughter, so is the daughter-in-law. But to the son the father does not capitulate very easily. He tries every possible way of keeping him to the traditions of Judaism. So the sons up to a certain age, go on filling the synagogues and the religious seminaries, and it is for the most that the prayerbooks and phylacteries are bought.

I have asked at the booksellers about the respective positions of their sales, and they informed me that as for general books they don't sell any, but a very brisk business is done in prayerbooks and other books of strictly religious contents, which sell in thousands. The business of the scribe, too, is not bad; phylacteries, mezuzoth, tallithim are sold in scores. Good trade is also done in powder puffs. Powder puffs for the daughter, prayer books for the son. The relations between father and daughter are peaceable; there is complete harmony between them. Equally peaceable are the relations between brother and sister. In the end, of course, the brother follows his sister's path, for her ways are much more to his taste. There are many left, though, who still stick to Jewish traditions.

The other day I was invited to a Jewish house where there was a double celebration; in the large hall there was a bar-mitzvah, and in an adjoining small room, the daughter's own room, the daughter was celebrating the successful passing of her final examination at a thoroughly Polish secondary school. In the large hall Yiddish was spoken, the most intricate Talmudic problems were discussed, and in the adjoining room not a word of Yiddish was spoken on principle, for she daughter is not only assimilated but she simply hates things Jewish as her father hates pork.

Warsaw is one of the most remarkable cities in this respect; life evolves out very low, piercing eyes, brazen demeanour, and side by side with it long coats, Chasidic fur hats, earlocks and big peruhim. And these are not people of different social classes—they are from the same street, the same family.

And on Saturday afternoons the melody of the father's Sabbath hymns mingles with his daughter singing the latest music-hall song.

A remarkable city! The old traditions of Jewry live peaceably side by side with the frivolity of a great city, the love of enjoyment, irresponsibility and debauchery. Peace reigns, and it is seldom that one hears of a family scandal, although in secret many a father's and many a husband's heart is bleeding.

There is something else which is of frequent occurrence in Warsaw; marriages and divorces. Marriages as in the good old days, with a Jewish band, a jester, presents, banquets till daybreak.

But more imposing still is the list of divorces. We will not say too much of the divorces because of the scandals attached to them.

A short visit to the Warsaw Chief Rabbi's office is enough to furnish all the data one wants.

You will find there a new kind of Jew whom hitherto you would have had to look for in the public house, café chantant and similar places. I mean the "don't-care-a-damn" fellow. A man who has his wife and children and seeks his pleasure anywhere but in his home. This is the type predominant now among the Warsaw Jews.

He is not of the "intellectuals" who are at daggers drawn with their wives. These seem to prefer to separate from their wives on the quiet. At the Chief Rabbi's office you find only the quiet "Jewish" Jews—men in [illegible] coats, the [illegible] type of the [illegible] wearing modern clothes still belong to the Jewish "upper" valets and maid girls, artisans and employees, west Hebrew writers and commercial agents—people all of them who belong most definitely to Jewish life.

And day in, day out, they are at the Chief Rabbi's office; they shout, they quarrel, they fight.

Here are four women, actually four women dragging after them one young man. The man—a dirty, untidy-looking Jew of about thirty-five, with a black matted beard, a weak chest, a Chasidic hat on his unkempt head—this is the "knight" for whom the four women are fighting. Three of the women are somewhere in the thirties, the fourth is about twenty-five. The first three are ugly, the fourth is not so bad.

And all four are fighting for the wreck of a man who during the last eight years managed to marry the four of them, each thinking she was his only wife. He used to tell each of them that his "business" (he is a "match-maker") required it that he must leave home for a day or two, and he went off from one and stayed for a while in the next street with one of the others. He had to lead a quadruple life; a couple of days with one wife, a couple of days with another and so on. And he took money from all of them. At last he was caught out, and now he is here with his four wives heaping curses upon him in a breath. Asked by the Rabbi which of the four is his lawful wife, he answers that he doesn't care for any of them, because he is about to marry a fifth!

And he cannot be punished by law for he married them all in the synagogue without going to the registry office so that legally he is still unmarried.

And the cases which come before the Rabbi! The husband complains: "She promised me as a dowry a room and a kitchen (in the present housing shortage a dowry of rooms is very welcome) and now we have got to live in a kitchen or in a garret. What do I want her for?"

Often it happens that a young man caught in this way goes out and finds a second wife in possession of a nice flat, marries her and lives happily until his first wife discovers where he is and gives him what for.

Not a day passes without a case like that coming up. The man is brought by force by the relatives of his first wife to the Chief Rabbi's office, and there the shouting starts. The party of the first wife demands that he should divorce the second wife, and the second wife naturally demands that he should divorce the first. Frequently the Rabbis get fed up and leave both parties to fight it out between themselves.

The task of the Rabbis is not an easy or enviable one. Often there are children by both wives and it is difficult to decide with which the husband should be made to stay. Usually the man decides for himself and the Beth Din simply acquiesces in his decision and divorces the one he wants divorced.

Not all deserted wives are lucky enough to get hold of their husbands and show them up before the Rabbi. Many wives are merely deserted so that they envy those who at least manage to trace their husbands and get a divorce from them.

became engaged to an Italian prince. Before the prince allowed his engagement to be announced, he came to the United States with his attorney and saw to it that an iron-clad legal financial settlement was consummated. When the dowry arrangements and documents were completed, the engagement was made public. The Jewish girl accepted Catholicism and subsequently the marriage took place in Italy. According to the views of the Catholic Church, all marriages are made in heaven and are indissoluble. This one can be no exception to the rule, yet this marriage was made in the business offices of a lawyer, by weak and frail humans, avid for power, wealth and station. Marriages are not made in heaven. They are contracted by mortal men and women, and they are subject to the limitations of all human arrangements.

Love cannot be bought with money, nor achieved by title, nor created by rite of religion or by law of state. Love must be created by man and wife. They can construct their heaven in their home or they can fail to do so. Consuelo and her duke failed to do so. They were handicapped from the start by the material basis of their marriage, but though the marriage was a mistake, it was yet a marriage, and no church decree can alter that. EMMA GOLDMAN LECTURE

Emma Goldman will lecture on Hendrick Ibsen, the social rebel and dramatist, at Hygeia Auditorium, 40 Elm Street, Monday, November 29, at 8.15 p.m. Miss Rebecca West, English literary critic, has written regarding Miss Goldman's lectures: "I read Miss Goldman's lectures on the drama with great interest because I had, during a visit to the United States, come across many evidences of the effect they made on their time. It is largely due to the interest they aroused that the theatre of the United States is in such a state of vitality and receptiveness that Shaw and Chekhov, for example, find vast audiences. Now that I have read her lectures, I can well understand their effects. The lectures on Strindberg and Chekhov strike me as especially remarkable in their elucidation of complex and subtle literary personalities. I know that Miss Goldman is familiar with much of the modern European drama (such as the German expressionists), and I am convinced that her explanation of them will be as admirable, particularly when I remember not only the literary content of her lectures, but the impressive method of her delivery." H. L. Mencken says: "I regard her as one of the most notable women now extant upon this planet; a woman of wide and deep culture, and a graceful and urbane writer, an ideal of a rare and often singularly winning sort."

Lady Battersea's Memoirs in the Canadian Jewish Review

Lady Battersea, the former Constance Rothschild, daughter of Sir Anthony and Lady de Rothschild, recalls her contacts with leading old World personages over a period of sixty years or more. She is here seen in a photograph taken a score years ago. Although the husband of Lady Battersea was not Jewish, she has been always ardently interested in Jewish affairs and her occasional poems breathe a steadfast and exalted Jewish spirit.

Men and women concerned with the Jewish charities of Vienna have had ever since the war, and have especially just now, an appallingly difficult task to accomplish. For what was at one time one of the wealthiest capitals in Europe, poverty [illegible] to a greater extent than in any other. And so to maintain Jewish hospitals, asylums and taxes, the few well-to-do members of our faith [illegible]. Commercial conditions could not well be worse and hardly a week passes when the bankruptcy of some prominent merchant for manufacturer is not announced. Among the institutions [illegible] maintained are the "Ferienheim" (Vacation Home) and "Seehospiz" Hospital Home for Jewish Children), the latter established on the Adria, near Trieste. The founder and president of these admirable institutions, Frau Sophie Grunfeld recently celebrated her seventieth birthday, which found her enjoying splendid bodily and mental health. The Vienna papers [illegible] tribute to her personality. Without her heroic labors and [illegible] devotion the "Seehospiz" would [illegible] have ceased to exist.

Take the first theoretic assumption that the people are, for political purposes, only Canadians, oblivious of their ordinary classifications. We find that somehow or other the employing class seems to view Canadian problems through one lense. Because of their affiliations in the sphere of industry they seem to achieve a remarkable unanimity in their views on politics. We find that the farmers of the West work together politically because they have agricultural interest in common. It is noticeable further that in making cabinets, party heads appear to maintain a certain balance among the different religious denominations. We know that after every federal election the papers tell us that the cabinet is made up of so many Irish-Catholics in Ontario, so many Protestants in Quebec, so many members from Manitoba, so many from Nova Scotia, etc. Considerations other than purely Canadian enter into play in these arrangements.

Let us look at the second theoretical assumption, that the political leaders are presumed to be men of patriotism and ability.

To be sure, in crises, the majority of our politicians rise to heights of patriotism. But ordinarily, in their manipulations of campaigns, they do not perch on a very lofty pedestal of political righteousness. Visualize the average president of ward association. His business is to create a machine in his division capable of delivering votes to his party when needed. He does not worry about principles, ideals or theories. If there happen to be a number of railroad men in his district, he will be a particular lover of railroad men. If there be a considerable colony of Jews, he will be attending engagement and wedding parties and learn to eat herring and "Mamelige." He will cater to each group and class with its idiosyncracies and differential.

And in most cases the candidates themselves stoop to the level of their ward heelers. Wire-pulling, double-crossing, chicanery, reckless promising—these reprehensible practices are quite the going in political campaigns. The fine theories of broad Canadianism are thrown to the winds. Prejudices, whims, peculiarities—the whole gamut of human frailties—these enter into the political game and give it colour and direction.

Now, in the world of practical politics, "realpolitik" as the Germans call it, the claim of the Jewish population in a large city assumes an entirely different aspect. In political theory we are Canadians who must look upon ballot-casting as upon a holy rite. In the sphere of political realities the situation is changed.

In Toronto, for example, we find that as a matter of fact the selection of members of parliament, virtually their election, is left in the hands of the few manipulators in the respective ridings. These manipulators know only one rule in the game: they traffick in power and influence. They reckon with those who command and can deliver votes. They pander to groups that can furnish votes.

In this sphere of vote-trafficking, where politicians reckon with every group that is worth anything politically, we find that the Jewish electorate, in the main an honest, intelligent and principled electorate, is treated without respect. In a riding where the Jewish element forms over one-third of the electorate the Jewish men who seek advancement in politics are being discriminated against because of their Jewishness.

In the ethical sphere of political theory the Jews must line up among the rest of the citizenry and await their turn. Perhaps some day, a rural constituency counting few Jews among its members, will pick out a Canadian Rufus Isaacs or Herbert Samuel in its rural retreats and send him to the capitals to serve Canada even as these other men have served England.

In the cockpit of politics, in the big cities, where politicians fight their battles for personal preferment, the Jewish young men of ambition and ability are entitled to equal opportunities with the others. And the Jewish population is justified in resenting the discrimination against its young men.

Toronto Jewry has many men at least as able to represent some constituency as the non-Jews who have gained the nominations. Several of these men have earned the opportunity for a political career, in the course of political apprenticeship. They have been denied the opportunity which was theirs as Canadians, because the politicians have felt that they need not reckon with the Jewish electorate in their calculations. The Jewish voters will act in keeping with the best interest of Canadian citizenship if they will use their franchise to ensure a fair show to their young men embarking on political careers.

It is extravagant to look upon the campaign of a Jewish candidate as upon a holy crusade on behalf of Jewry or Judaism. But in this particular campaign the political manipulators have dealt unfairly by the Jewish young men who aspire to political careers. And all right-thinking non-Jews as well as Jews will agree that the Jewish population is justified in showing its resentment.

It is particularly gratifying that the candidate running on the Jewish ticket is a man of such ability and standing as L. M. Singer. It is no exaggeration to say that he is by far the ablest man offering his candidacy in Toronto. Our city will have a worthy representative in the legislature if L. M. Singer is elected.

CHANGE OF NAME

Ziona Chapter of Hadassah have changed their name to the Wir Dienen Girls' Club. Members held their first social at a treasure hunt, Sunday, November 7. The treasure was found by Miss Molly Friedman and Sam Vale. The social took place at the home of Miss Beasie Smith, 484 Euclid Avenue, where a Dutch supper was served. Eighteen couples were present.

Confidence--the Keynote of Success

The knowledge that one is properly dressed creates that confidence which characterizes a successful man.

Collars that feel like a caress. The Van-Dusen and semi-soft made to rival the best starched collar.

Shirts that fit correctly. No bulging at neck or bosom. Cuffs turned evenly, and when necessary taken off and reversed.

Socks and Woollens with that soft, velvety feeling so much desired and only possible when a soap like "Ivory" is used.

Repairs—Every article the man wears kept in first-class condition, not merely "mending free."

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE PROVINCE OF ONTARIO

The issue with regard to temperance in the pending Provincial Election is between two temperance policies.

In this connection I would like to make clear two points:

FIRST, I was a member of the Hearst Government which put in force the Ontario Temperance Act in 1916. During the ten years it has been in operation I have been a Member of the Government of Ontario for nearly six years. My position, therefore, has given me opportunity to study conditions under the Ontario Temperance Act at close range. The Act has undoubtedly, in some respects, done much good. Unfortunately, however, it is quite apparent that it no longer commands the support of a sufficiently strong public opinion to secure satisfactory enforcement and observance.

SECOND, under the Ontario Temperance Act the Government has been operating twelve liquor stores. Our policy is to abolish the farce of medical prescriptions and substitute an official permit to purchase with proper restrictions and safeguards.

The whole question is between these two methods of handling liquor. Shall we continue to allow it to be uncontrolled, or shall we insist upon controlling it ?

I urge upon you to put aside the details and consider only the real issue. We are all desirous of doing the best thing for Ontario. We must have public opinion behind the Law to insure its existence and observance. Only in this way can advance along true temperance lines be achieved.
